

On many college campuses, a large amount of edible food is wasted in dining halls each day. Students often take more food than they can eat, misunderstand portion sizes, or discard items that could have been reused or shared. This ongoing issue contributes to unnecessary food waste, increases the campus's environmental footprint, and reflects a lack of awareness about sustainable dining habits.